

As a consumer of wireless services, I am completely in favor of wireless number portability both between wireless companies and between traditional wireline and wireless carriers, and I strongly oppose all efforts to limit number portability. I should "own" my phone number just like I "own" my internet domain name (www.douggravino.com), and have the ability to move my number to a carrier of my choice, regardless of the technology used to transfer my voice.